

University Institutes & Interdisciplinary Programs

Overview

Georgetown University is committed to fostering innovative scholarship and collaborative learning that transcend traditional academic boundaries. The University Institutes & Interdisciplinary Programs bring together diverse fields of study to address complex global challenges and offer distinctive educational pathways. In this section, students will find a range of specialized academic offerings—including master's degrees, certificates, and undergraduate minors—housed within cross-cutting hubs such as the Earth Commons, the Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and the Emerging Studies Institute just to name a few. These programs are designed to equip students with the multidimensional perspectives and specialized knowledge needed to lead, innovate, and engage meaningfully in an increasingly interconnected world.

Programs

Earth Commons

- Climate, Environment and Health, MS (<http://coursecatalog.georgetown.edu/programs/climate-env-health-ms/>)
- Environment & International Affairs, MS (<http://coursecatalog.georgetown.edu/programs/environment-international-affairs-ms/>)
- Environment & Sustainability Management, MS (<http://coursecatalog.georgetown.edu/programs/environment-sustainability-management-ms/>)

The Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs

- Religion, Ethics & World Affairs Minor (<http://coursecatalog.georgetown.edu/programs/religion-ethics-world-affairs-minor/>)