

Arab & Regional Studies (Qatar), Undergraduate Certificate

Learn how the internally diverse set of societies of this region have been shaped by both long-term historical processes and contemporary transformations.

Develop the analytic tools and frameworks to closely engage with regional perspectives within transregional and global contexts to understand the forces shaping governance, transformation, and cultural production across the region.

Requirements
Code	Title	Credits
HIST 1601	Middle East I	3
HIST 1602	Middle East II	3
One course on contemporary regional politics, focused on modern political institutions, processes, or challenges		3
One social science course, examining regional dynamics through disciplines such as sociology, anthropology, or economics		3
One humanities course, engaging cultural, intellectual, or historical production in the regional context.		3
One additional elective course, selected from any discipline and approved for the certificate		3
Certificate Thesis or ePortfolio
Total Credits		18