

Classics Minor

The remarkable diversity of subject matter included under the term Classics allows for several areas of concentration within the Classics major. This same diversity also makes a minor in Classics compatible with a wide range of other departments in the University.

The Department of Classics offers courses in Latin and Greek at the beginning, intermediate, and advanced undergraduate levels, including courses designed for students who have already been working at an advanced level for several years; in addition, the department offers courses in Classical Studies that explore ancient material and textual evidence through readings in English.

Requirements

Requirements for the Minor in Classical Studies

The Classical Studies minor requires six courses in CLSS, CLSL, CLSG at any level.