

Korean Minor

Requirements

Students majoring in other fields, particularly those involving Asian studies, are encouraged to minor in Korean. The Korean minor requires seven courses, at least six of which must be KREN language courses or advanced courses conducted in Korean. The seventh course may either be another KREN course conducted in Korean, a KREN course taught in English, or, with the approval of the EALC department, a Georgetown course with Korean literature, culture/civilization, or linguistics as a substantial component. The number of Korean minors over the past ten consecutive semesters has remained robust and consistent, averaging six per semester.
